

Ambassador (retired) Peter F. Romero has over 43 years of international service. As a US diplomat (24 years), his most recent postings include, US Ambassador to Ecuador and Assistant Secretary of State for the Western Hemisphere Affairs. He has also been an investment banker, security advisor, lecturer and currently producer and co-host of the popular podcast American Diplomat. He has specialized in mitigating conflict in some of the world's most inhospitable hotspots. His mix of community-based solutions and cutting-edge technologies have created stakeholders as a bulwark against bad actors. His efforts to reduce violence and conflict have proven successful in El Salvador, Colombia (he initially conceived and authored Plan Colombia), Ecuador, Peru, Panama and Lebanon.

He is sought-after for his expertise in mitigating the effects of Violent Non-State Actors (cartels, traffickers, terrorists, religious extremists, gangs, transnational organized crime and religious extremists). He teaches and lectures at: Marine Corps University, Quantico VA; US Army Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth; the Graduate School of Foreign Service at Georgetown University and George Mason University.

He is the recipient of the Department of States': Baker Wilkins Award for "Superlative leadership of an overseas mission"; Equal Employment Opportunity for his, "unwavering commitment to EEO principles"; the Walter Stoessel Award for Leadership; The Secretary's Distinguished Service Award, bestowed by Secretary Colin Powell; The President's Distinguished Service Award "...exemplifying the highest standards of service to the public and reflecting great credit on the career Senior Foreign Service"; as well as several Superior and Meritorious Honor Awards.

He is the creator and co-producer/host of the go-to podcast American Diplomat. Its unique mission is to entertain and inform the public with inside stories of our nation's career diplomatic practitioners.